Berner Air Curtains joins Eurovent Middle East

Dubai, 12 November 2024. Berner, a global pioneer in air curtain engineering, has joined Eurovent Middle East. The membership highlights the significance of quality air curtains for energy efficiency and sustainability in the region's built environments.

Berner Air Curtains, an American manufacturer with over 68 years of experience, combines engineering, state of the art equipment and highly skilled workers to produce highly efficient, good looking, cost-effective, and reliable air curtains. Its range of commercial, architectural, and industrial products effectively prevent heating or air conditioning from escaping through open doors, providing sizeable energy savings and personal comfort, along with insect control.

Christophe Sailly, Director of International Sales at Berner, expressed the company's commitment: "As regional regulations increasingly focus on energy efficiency, our goal is to spotlight the often-overlooked impact of well-designed, efficient air curtains. Eurovent Middle East provides us with a platform to engage with industry stakeholders and drive the conversation on the importance of quality air curtains in achieving these objectives. We are eager to collaborate with the association and its members to make a meaningful impact in the region."

Markus Lattner, Managing Director of Eurovent Middle East, welcomed Berner's membership: "Their decision to join reinforces the values we promote at Eurovent Middle East and through our HVACR Leadership Academy, aiming at advancing the understanding among professionals about energy efficiency, energy saving, and available HVACR technologies in the market. Berner Air Curtain brings an important dimension to our collective efforts in improving the region's standards and technology awareness."
